Trenditech is a tech start-up company that carried on business using innovative food waste solutions to rescue unsold and misfit produce from farms and manufacturers to create upscaled and upcycled products and ingredients to sell to consumers. The BT80 was designed to be capable of acting as a research and development lab where ingredients can be tested and shelf-stable samples can be created from misfit fruits and vegetables onsite. Its goal was to access rural communities which may not have easy access to certain utilities. The unit is off grid operable with onboard diesel generator.
