The tunic bears a label for Walter and Co Military Taylors and has a name tag sewed into the collar Henry Drummond-Wolfe as do the breeches.
- Henry Drummond Wolff was educated at Radley and the Royal Military College, Sandhurst and from 1917-1919 was in the Royal Flying Corps and then the RAF, he was elected Conservative member for Basingstoke at a by-election in March 1934.
- Such was the notoriety of Drummond Wolff with regards to his support for Nazism that he was used as an unofficial intermediary with Nazi Germany and was one of a number of leading British figures who regularly visited Germany in 1939 to hold talks with the Nazi government in an effort to avert war. Officially, such talks were not sanctioned by the government but in fact they were generally arranged with the support of Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, his Undersecretary R.A. Butler, or even Neville Chamberlain himself. In 1939, Conservative Central Office operative and former MI5 spy, Sir Joseph Ball, acting on behalf of Chamberlain, facilitated four lengthy visits to Germany by Drummond Wolff, who undertook negotiations with Helmuth Wohlthat and Walther Hewel (political advisers to Hermann Göring and Adolf Hitler respectively) amongst others. In the last of those trips, Drummond Wolff even held talks with Göring. However, the meeting accomplished little, because by that point, Drummond Wolff was so pro-Nazi that he would agree with the Nazi view and simply present it to the government, rather than suggesting compromises. A leading industrialist, his visits to Germany were excused as being on behalf of the Council of Empire Industries Association, of which Drummond Wolff was a leading member.

The models were made during the 1980s by Christopher Knutson after he had retired and was living in Monmouth. He took up model making purely as a retirement hobby and over a period of eight to ten years produced about a dozen models of various cart types. Several were given as presents to family members, these are the final ones. He was not a woodworker by trade but had the necessary skill and patience to make stuff like this: Note they are not made from 'kits', he purchased detailed plans and fashioned every component by hand. He was born in 1908 and died in 1994 of 'Industrial Disease', specifically lung damage due to his time as a coal miner in South Wales during the 1930s. He survived WWII, including Malta during the siege, but in the end the dust caught up with him.
