CLARISSA CARP - A unique opportunity to obtain arguably the most important preserved specimen carp, 'Clarrisa', caught by renowned angler and author Richard Walker. Caught in 1952 at Bernithan Pool (Redmire), Herefordshire, September 12th, weighing at the time a record 44lbs. The fish is mounted in a glazed bow fronted case, with gilt writing and border, set in a naturalistic reed and gravel setting, and restored in 2011 by Barry Williams, Cannock. This extremely important example promoted the modern day Carp angling movement. Five known cast replica copies were produced by Williams, with this being the original unique specimen. Measures 43x22x8.5" approx. The capture of Clarissa the record breaking 44lb carp in 1952 propelled Richard Walker into the record books and carp fishing royalty for life. The formation of the Carp Catchers Club by RW, Maurice Ingham and Denys Watkins-Pitchford (BB) with three others was created for the study of carp, their habits and behaviour, the end game to catch larger fish more often. Walker believed a 40lb carp could exist in British waters but was ridiculed by both anglers and the press. Bob Richards caught a record carp of 31lb 4oz in October 1951 from Bernithan, a small lake near Ross on Wye. He was immediately inducted into the Carp Catchers Club. Secrecy was top of the agenda, so the pool had to be renamed. BB suggested 'Redmire', a name that was to become carp-fishing folklore and the holy grail of carp fishers. Walker caught the fish on a 10' two piece split cane rod he made in his garden shed. This was to be the first rod specifically designed and built for carp fishing which he fitted with a Mitchell fixed spool reel. The famous Richard Walker Mk4 (three previous versions were part of the development) was born and has become the cult rod for any carp traditionalist. On that day in 1952 Walker fished with 'Green Butterfly' plaited nylon 12lb line and an Allcock's 'Model Perfect' taper shank hook, whipped direct to the line, no float, knots or lead. The bait being a home-made mix of paste and bread crust creating a balanced bait. Post capture RW phoned London Zoo from Bernithan Court and after a lengthy conversation a driver was sent to Redmire to collect the fish. Upon arrival at the Zoo, Clarissa was weighed at exactly 44lb on three sets of scales and witnessed by Ken Sutton. This record stood for 27 years! £35000-40000

A rare opportunity to purchase a piece of angling history. A unique B James & Son, London, England, 14' 3 piece prototype ferruleless Spanish Reed & split cane rod. Designed & owned by Richard Walker and purchased from Pat Walker (Dick's widow) via Peter Thomas with letter of provenance. Joe Emmens of Sheffield built the rod with twin butt rings in the traditional Sheffield style. It was finished by B James workshop in Ealing, in their trademark claret whipping. The rod was not taken on by Jim Bruce because the complexity of the build of the double splice reed proving too costly to produce as a commercial product. A typed facsimile letter confirming the Richard Walker ownership & provenance signed P.M. Walker & dated January 5th. 1994 accompanies the rod, along with a variety of letters, black/white photographs including one of Walker & Pete Thomas, plus an article extract with photograph showing Pete Thomas using this rod. £1500-2000

- The following two lots are the two reels referred to in the letter attached to both examples. Signed by Edward E Young, former Chairman and MD
- The Unidex Reel was designed in 1959/1960 and only two prototypes were ever produced. It was intended to be an automatic clockwork fly reel and the clockwork spring was wound up by drawing line from the reel. When loose line needed to be recovered on to the reel drum, the releasing of the brake allowed this to happen automatically. The first prototype was thought to be too heavy and some of the components which had previously been made in metal were re-made in plastic, in an attempt to save weight. It was eventually decided that the Tooling costs would be far too high to start producing the reel to be sold in volume.
