Lots 78-88: Part of The MacKenzie Ross Collection

These lots form part of the esteemed MacKenzie Ross Collection, a selection steeped in the rich history of golf and offered with great reverence to the game's legacy.

Alexander MacKenzie Ross was perhaps the most exceptional golfer to emerge from the Society during its Bruntsfield, Musselburgh, and early Barnton days. A member for thirty-eight years until his death in April 1915, his achievements remain unmatched. He claimed the Society's Gold Medal thirteen times most recently in 1908 at the age of 58 and won the Autumn Gold Medal an extraordinary eighteen times. At 57, he delivered one of his finest performances by setting a new Barnton course record with a score of 75. He was Chairman of the Forth Rubber Company.

His legacy continued through his son, Philip MacKenzie Ross, a prominent figure in Scottish golf. The owner of Edinburgh's Café Royal Hotel and a member of the Edinburgh Burgess Golfing Society, Philip was a frequent medallist at prestigious courses such as Gullane, Luffness, and North Berwick. He later became a founding member of the International Society of Golf Architects and established his own practice in the 1930s. As a golf course architect, Philip was held in equal regard to legendary contemporaries such as Herbert Fowler, Harry Colt, and Tom Simpson.

The black and white photographs inside are all the competing players which include Gottfried Von Cramm and Henner Henkel. The content introduces each player and shows the meeting schedule (all in Japanese). The Axis powers of Germany, Italy and Japanese (also known as the Axis alliance) or just the Axis, was an alignment of great powers during the mid-20th century that fought World War 2 against the Allies. It began in 1936 with treaties of friendship between Germany and Italy and between Germany and Japan. The wooden tennis racket is a very unusual pre-war 'Taikudo Athletic Goods-Tokyo' lawn tennis racket with spoon-shaped, flat-topped head - with just 16 vertical and 16 lateral strings, resulting in a very wide stringing pattern. Comes c/w 'BAG Aluminium Press overall (VG). Together with an Edwin Trim postcard of Japanese Davis Cup player Zenzo Shimidzu as well as an accompanying card autographed by him in the 1920s.
